Arson was ours: Anarchists

East Vancouver. Anti-gentrification group has claimed responsibility for housing-complex blaze

EMILY JACKSON
emily.jackson@metronews.ca

Attacks by a group of Vancouver anti-gentrification anarchists apparently escalated to arson with the burning of an East Vancouver housing complex early Wednesday morning.

A complex under construction at East 1st Avenue near Victoria Drive was extensively damaged due to a fire that started at approximately 1:39 a.m. Homes on either side received minor damage, but no one was hurt.

At the scene of the crime, graffiti on a portable toilet boasted, "We'll be back."

The same group of so-called anarchists that smashed windows at a Commercial Drive pizzeria and stole a sign from Downtown Eastside's Save on Meats took responsibility for burning down the "yuppie development" online.

"We wish and will create fear for developers in East Vancouver. The class war is heating up. We have no intention of stopping," the post by the Anti-Gentrification Front states.

Police have confirmed arson to be the cause of the fire, Const. Brian Montague said, but they cannot confirm whether those claiming responsibility are in fact the ones responsible for the crime.

CTV received an email that mentioned anarchists and anti-gentrification on Wednesday at noon from someone claiming responsibility for the fire, Montague said.

Arson investigators are trying to determine its origin, but police have yet to find the motive for the fire or link it to any specific group or person.

The "dangerous and careless act" could have resulted in injury or death of innocent people, he said.

Anti-gentrification sentiments have taken centre stage in Vancouver over the past few months with protests of up-scale restaurant Pidgin in the Downtown Eastside.

The latest fire prompted Vancouver Mayor Gregor Robertson to issue a statement saying the fire is of "significant concern ... especially in light of extremist claims made online."

"Violence of any kind will not be tolerated in the City of Vancouver, and any criminal acts will be investigated and responded to with every resource at our disposal."

34.1% of legislature

Election gives B.C. the most women representatives in Canada

British Columbia now has the highest percentage of woman representatives of any legislature in the country.

After Tuesday's election, women represent 29 of 85 ridings in the province and make up 34.1 per cent of the legislature.

That number doesn't include Premier Christy Clark, who lost her seat to NDP MLA David Eby in Vancouver–Point Grey.

Clark is expected to run in a byelection that has yet to be announced and if she takes the spot of a male MLA, women would make up 35.3 per cent of the legislature.

Equal Voice B.C. are celebrating the increased female presence in Victoria, which is now the province with the most female representatives, but are urging parties to run more female candidates.

Quebec is a close second with 32.8 per cent of its legislative seats being held by women.

"British Columbians have never seen so many women in the legislature before," said Equal Voice B.C. chair Carolyn Jack in a statement.

"Despite the positive results in Tuesday's vote, we are still a long way from gender equality in the representation of women in B.C.'s highest democratic institution."

The Liberals elected 15 women, the NDP 13, while independent Delta South MLA Vicki Huntington brings the total to 29.

Ready for these jellies?

In the swim of things. Jelly Invasion exhibit at the Vancouver Aquarium features more than 15 species

KATE WEBB
kate.webb@metronews.ca

They're boneless, brainless, heartless and dangerous. They poop through their mouths, and they're doing it while on display right now at an aquarium near you.

The Jelly Invasion exhibit made its debut Thursday at the Vancouver Aquarium, featuring more than 15 species from around the world.

Interpretive specialist Alex Clegg said the aquarium decided to showcase the stinging invertebrates because they have been making headlines in recent years.

"Invasions of jellyfish and jellyfish blooms are happening in areas, and people are curious about where all these jellyfish are coming from," he said.

B.C. is home to about 75 species of jellyfish, including plenty of moon jellies, which can form huge blooms and have been known to shut down power plants by clogging up water-intake pipes in other parts of the world.

"We go through annual cycles, just like most other places that have jellyfish," he said.

On the web

To view the daily schedule of Jelly Invasion, visit vanaqua.org.

Indian Arm is particularly prone to blooms of colourful orange lion's mane jellies, he added, because they get pushed into the fjord and can't get out again.

In the open ocean, lion's mane jellies can grow to be 60 metres — the length of five public-transit buses — but in B.C., Clegg said, the largest one he has ever seen was the size of a basketball.

"They're all over," he said. "You could probably find them off English Bay."

He said humans are spurring the apparent boom in jellyfish populations worldwide, and raising awareness is part of the Vancouver Aquarium's motive for hosting the exhibit.

Clegg said jellyfish thrive in overfished and polluted areas with intense algae blooms, since their prey — mainly plankton — feed primarily on algae.

Climate change and nutrient-rich agricultural runoff are contributing to the problem.

The exhibit contains some practical information as well, such as an explanation why scraping the clinging cells of a jellyfish off your skin with a credit card is a much better solution to a sting than peeing on it.

Urban farmers find fertile grounds within Vancouver

Trend. Agricultural revolutionaries grow local produce to sell in markets, restaurants to reconnect the city with its food sources

TYLER HARBOTTLE
The Canadian Press
exclusively for Metro

Sue Chappel's neighbours must have cringed when two young women showed up one afternoon with a gas-powered sod stripper and tore up Chappel's lawn. When they were done, only a small dogwood tree remained, standing alone on a two-square-metre patch of grass surrounded by dirt.

What they didn't know is Chappel's Mount Pleasant Vancouver yard would be transformed into a vegetable micro-farm, and become part of an urban agricultural revolution — one that has spread from rooftop beehives and parkade greenhouses to front lawns across the city.

Ruth Warren and Katie Ralphs, the urban farmers who started City Beet Farm last year, chose Chappel's yard for it's sunny aspect, level surface and proximity to their nine other plots.

Quoted

"People are starting to ask how is it that food shipped in from halfway around the world is actually cheaper than the food at the farmers' market."

Urban Farmer Emi Do

From trays of seedlings in aluminum trailers they towed there with their bikes, Warren and Ralphs will choose onions, tomatoes, bok choi and Napa cabbage to plant in the fresh compost soil laid down this week.

Urban farmers like Warren and Ralphs are growing hyper-local produce to sell in markets, restaurants and to paying supporters to harness Vancouver's "locavore" trend and reconnect the city with its food sources.

"Everyone has to eat food, but nobody knows where it comes from," said Ralphs, taking a break from raking heaps of compost into an even topcoat.

"It just seems really crazy that we eat three times a day and we have no clue where it comes from, or how it's grown, or what pesticides and chemicals are put on it," she said.

At another urban farm in Vancouver, Emi Do, whose company is called Yummy Yards, spoke on the phone while plucking weeds from a veggie patch.

"I think it's a growing movement, a growing recognition that there's a disconnection from food and a curiosity that's been piqued," said Do, who has farmed people's front and backyards for three years.

"People are starting to ask how is it that food shipped in from halfway around the world is actually cheaper than the food at the farmers' market. Why is this happening?" said Do, adding she got into farming to look for solutions to the high levels of malnutrition she witnessed in her previous career as a health practitioner.

"I didn't understand why our food system was so disconnected and why we're suffering from such high levels of malnutrition in our current society. That's why I became active in growing food and (wanted) to learn more about the process," she said.

Not enough cash, interest for mega gallery: Condo king

Art is in the trees. Vancouver locals 'entertained naturally,' Bob Rennie says

EMILY JACKSON
emily.jackson@metronews.ca

Vancouverites would rather squeeze into a pair of Lululemons and bike along the seawall than spend $100 for a family of four to go to an art gallery, condo king Bob Rennie argued on Thursday.

While he made sure not to single out the Vancouver Art Gallery's estimated $300-million plan to build a new facility — if it can raise enough cash by April 2015 — Rennie laid out his arguments why Vancouver can't support a mega-project such as Sydney's Opera House or New York's Museum of Modern Art at his annual Urban Design Institute address to a crowd of business types, including Premier Christy Clark.

Vancouverites are "always outdoors" and "entertained naturally," he said. Besides, even multimillionaires get more social status from Canucks box tickets than for art donations, he added.

And, perhaps more crucially for projects that depend on funding from the extremely wealthy, there simply isn't a deep enough donor pool to support the arts-and-culture scene enjoyed by New York or Toronto, he said. (New York had about 389,000 millionaires in 2012 and Toronto 118,000, according to a top 20 list by WealthInsight. Vancouver didn't make the cut.)

Only 4.9 per cent of people in the region earn more than $100,000 a year, with only 0.6 per cent earning more than $250,000, Rennie said, according to census data.

But perhaps it comes down to the seeming lack of interest in mega-projects when compared to community cultural amenities.

Rennie pointed out that only about 400 people signed a petition to build the new VAG — a proposal he loudly opposed — while more than 18,000 people signed an online petition to save East Vancouver's culture hub, the Waldorf Hotel.

Swimming against the climate

Swim fans excited to hit Vancouver's outdoor pools on opening day might want to ignore the weather forecast. Kitsilano pool, Second Beach pool in Stanley Park and East Vancouver's New Brighton pool — all heated, seaside pools — and the Hillcrest Aquatic Centre's outdoor pool are slated to open on Saturday. But along with the long weekend comes a rainy forecast. There's a 60 per cent chance of showers and a high of 14 C on Saturday, according to Environment Canada. JENNIFER GAUTHIER/METRO

Officers commended for saving lives in Guatemala

A 12-year-old girl's brutal shooting death at a high school soccer match is just one of the murder scenes Vancouver Insp. Peter Jarvis investigated while training police in Guatemala, a country torn apart by gang violence.

Jarvis is part of the Combined Forces Special Enforcement Unit of B.C., which received an award Thursday from Guatemala's Attorney General Claudia Paz Y Paz and the Justice Education Society for training Guatemalan justice officials to investigate organized crime.

Intervention from B.C. police organizations in Guatemala began in 2000, and since then conviction rates have risen more than 20 per cent.

But there are still an average of 15 murders per night in Guatemala City, according to statistics from World Bank.

Jarvis said eight to 10 B.C. police officers have gone to Guatemala for weeks at a time to train justice officials in investigative techniques in the past few years.

Police say the gang problem has seriously threatened the country's survival, and crime from there has migrated into the United States and Canada.

Mayor appears to smoke crack in video: Torstar

'False and defamatory'. Lawyer retained by Toronto's Rob Ford asks how reporters can verify what someone is doing or smoking in a video

Toronto Mayor Rob Ford talks to the media in his office Thursday. Two Torstar News Service reporters have seen a video appearing to show Ford smoking crack. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

A cellphone video that appears to show Toronto Mayor Rob Ford smoking crack cocaine is being shopped around that city by a group of men involved in the drug trade.

Two Torstar News Service reporters have viewed the video, which appears to show Ford sitting in a chair, inhaling from what appears to be a glass crack pipe. Ford is incoherent, trading jibes with an off-camera speaker who goads the clearly impaired mayor by raising topics including Justin Trudeau and the high-school football team Ford coaches.

At one point he is heard calling Trudeau a "fag." Later in the 90-second video he is asked about the football team and he appears to say, "They are just f—g minorities."

Torstar had no way to verify the video, which appears to clearly show Ford in a well-lit room. Attempts to reach Ford and members of his staff were unsuccessful.

A lawyer retained by Ford, Dennis Morris, said that Thursday's publication by the Gawker website of some details related to the video was "false and defamatory." Morris told Torstar that by viewing a video it is impossible to tell what a person is doing. "How can you indicate what the person is actually doing or smoking?" Morris said.

Ford's chief of staff, Mark Twohey, would not listen to questions by Torstar reporters on Thursday night and abruptly hung up when they called.

The video was taken on a phone by a person who said he has supplied crack cocaine to the mayor.

Mike Duffy resigns from Conservative caucus

Unanswered questions. Senator stepping aside amid spending scandal

Senator Mike Duffy resigned from the Conservative caucus to sit as an independent on Thursday night amid controversy over his housing claims, leaving a host of questions about the nature of his expenses and why the prime minister backed him for so long.

The employment status of Stephen Harper's chief of staff, Nigel Wright, remains unchanged — despite his secret gift to Duffy to help repay the improper expenses.

Only a week ago, the Conservative government was hailing Duffy's leadership for repaying the funds the Senate said he owed. Senate Leader Marjory LeBreton declared the matter closed.

But then it came to light that Wright had cut Duffy a personal cheque to cover the repayment in March. Harper's office characterized it as a personal gift, but this week Duffy called it a loan. The Canadian Press reported Thursday that Duffy campaigned for the Conservatives during the April 2011 election while claiming to be on Senate business.

"Mr. Duffy's claim that he had secured a bank loan came as a complete surprise. All of the revelations relating to the expenses during the campaign are new," a government official said on condition of anonymity.

Still, the Conservative leadership in the Senate and the prime minister's office were aware that Duffy had not fully participated in an independent audit of his living and housing expenses. At issue are claims made by Duffy and two other senators that their primary residences were outside the national capital region. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Greenhouse gas. Harper says technology is key to reducing emissions

Technological change will prove to be the key to cutting greenhouse-gas emissions, Prime Minister Stephen Harper told a blue-chip audience on Thursday.

Simply imposing emissions targets or trying to cap economic growth to reduce emissions isn't going to work, Harper said during a question-and-answer session at the Council on Foreign Relations in New York City.

"I am convinced that, over time, we are not going to effectively tackle emissions unless we develop the lower-emissions technology in energy and other sectors," he said.

"That is the thing that will allow us to square economic growth with emissions reduction and environmental protection. I'm convinced if we cannot square those, we are not going to make progress globally."

Any realistic international agreement to limit emissions has to cover everyone, not just the developed world, he added.

"We need a mandatory, international protocol that includes all significant emitters, and if we do not get that we will not be able to control global emissions."

Over the course of the hour-long session, a relaxed-looking Harper discussed climate change, the Keystone XL pipeline and Alberta's oilsands, as well as medicare, border issues, the Middle East and the perils that bedevil the global economy.

He waved off the concerns of environmental critics as he pitched the TransCanada pipeline project as a good thing for the United States that would, if approved, create thousands of jobs and reduce American reliance on offshore oil.

"One needs to put this is a global perspective,'' Harper said. "Less than one-tenth of one per cent of global emissions are in the oilsands. It's almost nothing globally."

Blast from the past: Beaver Canoe paddles back to life

Canadiana comeback. Target to carry collection from homegrown '80s brand that will include apparel, home decor

Fall debut

GETTY IMAGES FILE

- The Beaver Canoe apparel line is slated to arrive in Canadian Target stores on Sept. 8, with the home collection set to hit stores on Sept. 15.

Target is bringing an added dose of Canadiana to its stores north of the border through a new partnership with Beaver Canoe.

The U.S.-based retailer has announced an exclusive collaboration with the Beaver Canoe brand, which is part of Roots Canada.

In what is billed as a first for the brand, the Beaver Canoe for Target collection will feature home decor products. The home collection will include more than 65 pieces, including furniture, pillows, lighting, frames, vases and candles.

The Beaver Canoe collaboration with Target will also encompass a clothing collection for the retailer, which will include hoodies, sweatshirts, T-shirts, track pants and long-sleeve tops for toddlers to adults, in addition to outerwear and accessory offerings for men and women. Prices for items in both the home and apparel collections will range from about $8 to $100.

The partnership marks the second exclusive collaboration between Roots and Target. The retailer carries the Roots Outfitters collection, including fashions for women, men, boys, girls and toddlers.

Wireless deal

Telus plan to buy Mobilicity could up prices, warns advocacy group

Telus announced a plan Thursday to buy struggling wireless carrier Mobilicity for $380 million, a deal observers say will prompt higher prices for monthly cellphone service if it is allowed. "Maybe you want to talk to your provider and renegotiate your deal now," said John Lawford, executive director of the Public Interest Advocacy Centre. "In a lot of places where Mobilicity offers service you're going back to just three operators ... Prices will just go up."

Transit. Riding the rails to promote infrastructure

More online

- To follow Kadie Ward's journey, go to metronews.ca.

The birth of Canada's national railway has been widely viewed and written about as the physical link that connected and, ultimately, created our country.

More than 128 years later, London, Ont.'s Kadie Ward is out to show the government there's more work to be done.

Ward, along with a multimedia crew, will board a VIA Rail train Tuesday in Halifax and ride the rails all the way to Vancouver, where she'll attend the Federation of Canadian Municipalities' annual conference. Along the way, she'll blog about how cities on the route are successfully using transit and digital infrastructure to connect people.

Ward also plans to highlight shortcomings. The end goal, she said, is convincing municipal, provincial and federal leaders that Ottawa's recent $14-billion commitment to infrastructure upgrades needs to be pumped into more than roads and sewers.

Investing the money in projects like regional transit initiatives packs a much bigger bang for the government's buck, said Ward, who's spent years working in economic development.

THE METRO LIST

1 Diplomacy. Osaka Mayor Toru Hashimoto defended forced prostitution of "comfort women" in the Second World War, saying that they were necessary in providing much needed "rest" to soldiers. Hashimoto, previously the youngest governor in Japanese history, stated last year that Japan needed "a dictatorship." He has what I call "political Tourette's."

2 Migratory patterns. The U.S. Senate is considering a bill allowing Canadian "snowbirds" to stay down south for longer. Currently, Canadian citizens can spend up to six months in America without losing their health coverage. The new bill would grant an extension of 60 additional days. If it passes, the "early bird" team at the Cheesecake Factory will also throw in a plastic couch cover with a cable subscription for 24-hour reruns of Golden Girls and Matlock.

3 Revolving doors. Jay Leno is replaced by Jimmy Fallon, whose spot will be filled by Seth Meyers. Jon Stewart takes a break, leaving John Oliver to host The Daily Show, and Barbara Walters announces impending retirement while Craig Ferguson hopes Letterman will do the same. Jimmy Kimmel has lost weight, so no one recognizes him, and when I ask my grandmother what she watches, she says, "Johnny Carson."

4 Oops. P.E.I. Sen. Mike Duffy misclaimed expenses for his Ottawa home, but once audited, was able to pay back $90,000 with a cheque from the PM's chief of staff. He also repaid $1,050 for expenses declared while in Florida for non-Senate business. In unrelated news, a man arrested for grand theft auto told authorities, "Was that not my mother's car? My bad. Take it back."

5 Space Oddity. They're calling astronaut Chris Hadfield a rock star: First Canadian to command the International Space Station, almost a million Twitter followers and YouTube hits, and a Bowie cover music video. After being up for so long, he finally came back to Earth, acclimating himself at a rehabilitation centre. He's not just a rock star, he's Steven Tyler.

6 Just chew it. Life moves quickly and there's not always time to grab a Red Bull, espresso, or mochalattechino. So put a pack of Jolt Energy Gum in your pocket, and never again worry about feeling sluggish, or sleepy, or having your heart-rate dip below 190 bpm. Jolt is poised for stimulant success with slogans like, "Don't drive drowsy," "Kick ass in class," or my personal fave, "A party in your pocket!" Umm ... Yes please.

7 Anti-social media. Disney actress Ashley Tisdale has been shaken by an obsessed fan who sent her more than 18,000 tweets before showing up at her home. LAPD is investigating, but did not consider him dangerous until reading an insane message where he said that High School Musical was the greatest movie ever made.

8 This week in... 1976, The Rolling Stones hit No. 1 on U.S. album charts with Black And Blue, their first with Ron Wood replacing Mick Taylor on guitar. Now celebrating 50 years of sex, drugs, and rumours that Keith Richards is a vampire, the boys are coming to Montreal and Toronto. Excellent opportunity to party with granddad.

9 R.I.P. The world lost a maverick this week in celebrity psychologist Dr. Joyce Brothers who brought sexual conversation to mainstream media. Without her, we would still be repressed and probably never know a Kim Kardashian.

Barbie house opens with controversy

The Barbie Dreamhouse Experience, near Berlin's trendy Alexanderplatz shopping district, is a life-sized house full of Barbie fashion, furniture and accessories. It's open to the public until Aug. 25 before it moves on to other cities in Europe.

The attraction is not without criticism. A topless woman from female rights group Femen targeted the opening of the Dreamhouse Thursday, holding a burning doll on a crucifix and dozens of other protesters flooded the premises with signs, shouting.

METRO

Re-evaluating the dream

"For us, this so-called Dreamhouse symbolizes the beauty craze and the discrimination of women in modern day life. It presents a cliché of the female role in society."

Michael Koschitzki,
Socialist Alternative editor told NBC News

The protest was supported by other left-wing demonstrators shouting "pink stinks" who were swiftly ejected from the Dreamhouse site by security staff.

RE: Mayor Defends Use Of Wartime Prostitution, published May 15

May I suggest a proper headline for your article on a Japanese mayor justifying sexual slavery during the Second World War?

"Mayor defends use of wartime rape."

In your article you quote the mayor as saying kidnapping, forcible confinement, rape, torture, and beatings were not sex trade, but in Japan were necessary to "maintain discipline."

Let us be clear: torture and sexual abuse are never necessary, and can never be justified as a means of maintaining discipline. What happened was rape.

The use of so called "comfort women" was neither discipline nor sex trade. It was abuse and torture. Tens of thousands of young women were kidnapped as sex slaves by the Japanese army during the Second World War. Many women were teenagers. Many died. Japan has never formally apologized nor compensated for this war crime. It was a war crime. It was torture. It was rape.

The women who were abused deserve nothing less than a full apology. So does the world.

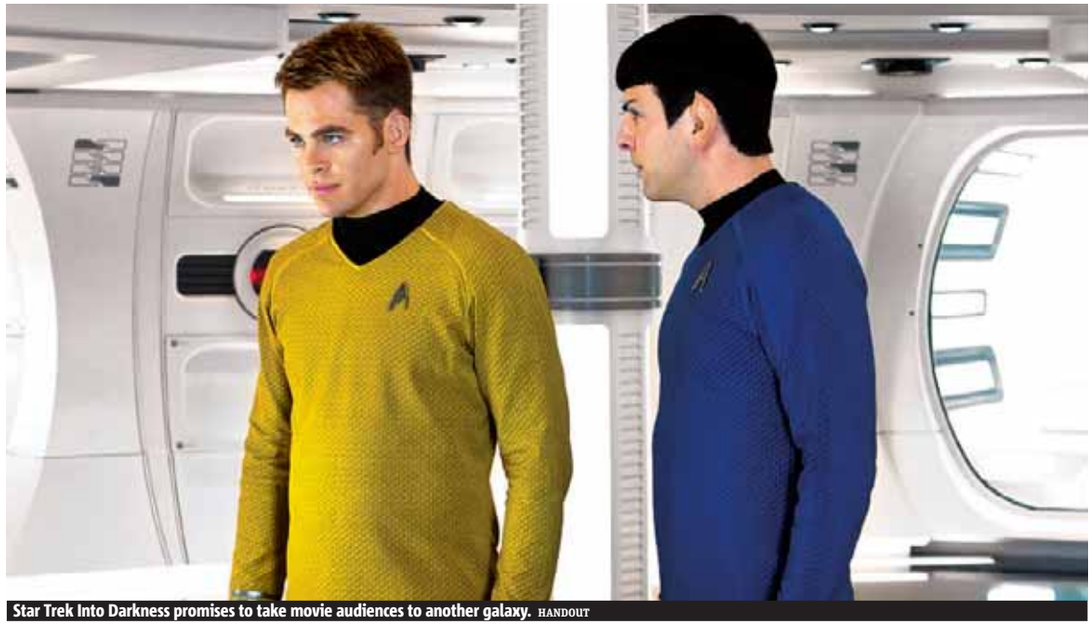
Synopsis

With Star Trek Into Darkness set to take movie audiences where no audience has gone before over this long weekend, the Reel Guys thought they would have a look at other movies that explore the final frontier.



Star Trek Into Darkness promises to take movie audiences to another galaxy. HANDOUT

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Stars of outer space

Film's final frontier. With Star Trek the must-see movie this weekend, the Reel Guys look back at their favourite flicks from another world

Richard: Mark, Into Darkness is the best pure popcorn flick of the year so far. It is state of the art in every way, particularly when it comes to the effects. As great as it looks, I'm a sucker for '50s B-movie effects like the 40-foot tall martian in the low budget 1959 space opera The Angry Red Planet. The campy creature was actually a 15-inch tall puppet made from elements of a rat, bat, spider, and crab and was later featured on the cover of the Misfits' album, Walk Among Us. What are some of your favourites?

Mark: Interesting you mentioned Angry Red Planet. I saw it when I was 10 at a downtown matinee and still shudder at the scene where the astronaut was turned into lime Jell-O. But when I was 16, Barbarella became my favourite movie set in outer space — that is, Jane Fonda's cleavage. But if it's cheese you're looking for, I want to nominate Mars Needs Women, a made for TV movie from 1967. Basically a beach party flick set in outer space featuring amazons, strippers and secretaries, it's best appreciated late at night with the kind of wine that comes in a box.

RC: Box wine has enhanced many a bad movie for me. No wine needed for Moon, a unique and fascinating sci fi film directed by David Bowie's son, Duncan Jones. Set on a space station, it's the story of a worker, played by Sam Rockwell, who discovers he may not be alone on his mission. To say anymore would ruin a really well constructed movie that cares more about ideas than special effects.

MB: Moon is a classy puzzle movie that owes a lot to Kubrick's 2001: A Space Odyssey, the classiest space movie ever, maybe even too classy for its own good. Is it heretical to say that it bored me a bit? Alien sure didn't bore me. And its sequels, even the weak ones, kept me excited. But let's remember that not all space movies are necessarily monster movies. I'm thinking of The Right Stuff and Apollo 13, two films that rightly celebrate the courage and tenacity of the early astronauts. Both very exciting movies, I think.

RC: I agree, and let's not forget In the Shadow of the Moon, a beautifully shot documentary that features real life astronauts like Buzz Aldrin and Neil Armstrong.

MB: On a lighter note, let's not forget Galaxy Quest, the funniest movie to take place in outer space.

Thriller

The Reluctant Fundamentalist

Director. Mira Nair

Stars. Riz Ahmed, Liev Schreiber, Kate Hudson

When Changez moves to the U.S. from Pakistan, he's got everything going for him: an Ivy League education, a beautiful girlfriend, a top job on Wall Street. And then 9/11 happens, and the Manhattan prince becomes a pariah virtually overnight. Mira Nair's The Reluctant Fundamentalist explores a character's reflections on a life thwarted by terrorism, and presents a rare, non-American perspective on the political and social fall-out from 9/11.

Drama

Mud

Director. Jeff Nichols

Stars. Matthew McConaughey, Reese Witherspoon

This slow moving Mississippi river-set movie features infidelity, murder and theft, but at its heart it isn't really about any of those things. Not really. Instead it's a story about the things we do for love. When two 14-year-old boys discover a mysterious stranger named Mud (Matthew McConaughey) living on a remote island, they get drawn into a possibly illegal scheme to reunite the loner with his true love Juniper (Reese Witherspoon). Methodical and moody, the film takes its time telling the story, but the performances — particularly from McConaughey and child actor Tye Sheridan — are stellar and quietly effective.

Drama

The Iceman

Director. Ariel Vroman

Stars. Michael Shannon, Winona Ryder

Richard Kuklinski was a particularly puzzling personality, so it must have been tricky for director Ariel Vroman to craft much more than a fascinating surface-level biopic on The Iceman. The true tale of a 1960's family man-turned-cold-killing hitman for the mob, this drama may not uncover many psychological answers to Kuklinski's actions, but with mesmerizing performances led by Michael Shannon (Boardwalk Empire), The Iceman will still leave most audiences frozen in their seats. Pinkett Smith talks the power of women

Angela Davis doc.
Actress says spending time with activist changed her and prompted growth

Jada Pinkett Smith may have started as an actress, but these days her list of jobs includes author, singer-songwriter, philanthropist, successful businesswoman — and, of course, wife and mother.

With husband Will Smith, she started Overbrook Entertainment, which has produced many of Smith's films, as well as the upcoming remake of Annie. But Pinkett Smith's more recent focus has been the documentary Free Angela Davis and Other Political Prisoners, which marks the 40th anniversary of the acquittal of the 1970s political activist who was once on the FBI's Most Wanted list.

Davis was removed from her teaching job at UCLA in 1969 because she was a member of the Communist Party. A year later, she was charged with murder and kidnapping in a shootout in front of the Marin County, Calif., courthouse, then acquitted by an all-white jury.

Pinkett Smith says she learned a lot from spending time with Davis, who was by her side for this interview.

What did you know about Angela Davis growing up?
I knew that she was a pivotal part of the movement and I knew that she was powerful and I knew that she was intelligent, but what I didn't receive was the beauty of her feminine side, you know, and her softness, and the strength in her vulnerable nature ... I've learned a lot just simply being in her presence in that way.

You seem quite comfortable sharing your views on social media — you recently asked whether white women should be allowed on the cover of black women's magazines.
One of the reasons that I did that is right now one of my very strong focuses at this point is trying to figure out how to engage women to flow power to one another. The idea is that there's a white woman's issue. Or there's a black woman's issue. There's a Latina woman's issue. The idea for women to understand is that if we could come together and flow each other power for issues that affect us all, that we would get a lot done.

These are subjects that we can't be afraid to talk about because they hurt. That's the step toward getting to solutions, and the step toward community.

The Hangover Part III opens next Friday. HANDOUT

This Hangover is all Alan

Zach Galifianakis. The weirdest part of the trio becomes the focal point of this final instalment

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

What's one more trip to Las Vegas between friends? The Hangover Part III finds Phil (Bradley Cooper), Stu (Ed Helms) and loose cannon Alan (Zach Galifianakis) teaming up for one last road trip gone wrong. Only this time, Galifianakis' Alan goes from comic relief to main character, which is a particularly risky proposition — at least according to Galifianakis.

Alan really takes centre stage in this instalment.
Yeah, as disheartening as that is (laughs). No, I mean we'll see if the audience thinks that an Alan storyline is sustainable for a movie — I mean a lot of Alan. There's a lot of Alan in this. I was excited because we got to explore Alan a little bit rather than have him be just a one-dimensional character that's kind of weird and saying random things. In this third instalment I think there's a little bit more of an emotional arc with him, which I appreciate. It's more of a story than just jokes with Alan this time. I don't know at the end of this where Alan goes. I think it's kind of open-ended, but at least he seems like he's on the right path.

I was going to ask where you see him five years from now.
Running the Tea Party. No, that's just a good-natured joke. I don't know where Alan would be. Hopefully he's married, and he probably drives by Phil's house a lot and honks to see if Phil will come out, and then Phil maybe looks through his blinds to see who it is, if it's Alan outside. Every other Thursday Phil will come out and say hi to him.

They've been billing this as the final instalment. Why is the trilogy the standard for film series?
Well, part of it is overstaying your welcome, I think. After the first one I was fine with just leaving well enough alone, to be honest. But then it was so fun to do the movies, and I thought there was more to explore, ultimately. But after the third one ... it's part of, as I said, not overstaying your welcome, and just the timing of it seems right to not do anything else with this. I've never really thought about the trilogy thing. The good thing about the third one is it allows kind of a nice goodbye. With the second one there's no closure, really. There was an event, they'll go on with their lives. This one seems like there's a little bit of closure.

The Hangover films have been phenomenally successful. If this one follows suit, do you think you'll have to try to talk them out of making a fourth one?
Well, I think it's bad to do movies because of economic gain. As an entertainer or an actor, you want to try to do other things and challenge yourself to try other roles, and it's time to move on. I think everybody feels that, the director and the other actors — and not out of anything but love. There won't be a fourth.

Speaking of doing new things, you're currently filming Birdman, a comedy from Alejandro Gonzalez Iñarritu, who's better known for heavier films.
It's a comedy, and Alejandro hasn't made one. He's a great filmmaker, obviously. The little I can tell you about (it)is you kind of know you're in the hands of a really experienced technician and great filmmaker. It's been a really great work experience for me. I'm there with really serious actors who've done really accomplished work. I think I'm the only one in the cast who's never won a trophy ...

Jordana Brewster lives life in the fast lane

Fast & Furious 6. In a high action movie full of muscles and mayhem, actress taps into her maternal side

RICHARD PECKETT
Metro World News

There are very few movies where you can use phrases like "oiled bodies" and "torqued to the max" and accurately describe both men and machines — but Fast & Furious 6 is one of them. It's the series' latest gear-head film where muscle Dominic Toretto (Vin Diesel) and the rest of his car-thievin' gang smash bang and wallop their way through yet another international criminal threat. The sixth instalment brings its hefty carbon footprint to London to stop the evil Brit, Owen Shaw (Luke Evans), with all the death-defying stunts, explosions and sick-making driving we've come to expect from the franchise. Amongst all of the testosterone-fuelled fist pumping and steely looks, there's the relative calm of Jordana Brewster, who plays Mia Toretto, Vin Diesel's on-screen sister and linchpin of the "criminal family." We chat to Jordana about real-life speeding, babies and why guys who drive souped-up cars are "douche bags."

It's an intense, high-octane movie that frankly gave me heart palpitations. What gets your heart racing?
Ah, you know, I'm really claustrophobic, so that'll get my heart racing.

Any bad experiences?
I think it's something that comes with age, and I'm only 33, but it happened in my late 20s: I got in a plane and it felt really enclosed and I started freaking out and I just couldn't breathe.

You play quite a maternal role in the latest Fast and Furious, has the film made you broody at all?
Has it made me broody? Meaning wanting a baby? Yeah. I definitely want kids really soon. I would like two or three, so I better get started and my husband, who is eleven years older than me, is game whenever I'm game.

Show offs

What's with guys and flashy cars?

Guys that drive souped-up, flashy cars look a bit ridiculous. Do you think that they're a bit of a penis extension?
I think they can be for some men … and you usually know when you see it. The car that's the loudest and the flashiest will have a douche bag behind the wheel. Yeah, it's like jewelry or the bag you're wearing, you shouldn't have to show off too much through something material.

Catch Jordana Brewster in Fast & Furious 6 in theatres next Friday. HANDOUT

The girls do as much fighting as the guys, are you a little envious that you didn't get a few more fight scenes?
A little bit. That was a sacrifice … I love what the baby brings into the mix. I love that it shows (Diesel's character) Dom's very sweet vulnerable side. The fact that he has a new nephew shows the new dynamic in Mia and Brian's relationship, but I didn't get to kick ass like Gal (Gadot), Michelle (Rodriguez), and Gina (Carano).

I've been in quite embarrassingly pathetic scuffles. Have you ever been in a proper fight?
A girl slapped me once. I went to an all girls' school in New York and a girl slapped me in the dark room — I was developing pictures — and she slapped me and I slapped her back. It was a bitch slapping.

Is that the worst girly battle you've been in?
Actually no, my sister and I would get in really bad fights when we were younger and I would threaten to bite her all the time. So I would bare my teeth and that was my threat… Yeah, we were just really aggressive.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

Supportive Voight was unaware of his daughter Jolie's mastectomy

Talk about not being in the loop. John Voight says he found out about daughter Angelina Jolie's voluntary double mastectomy the same way everyone else did — reading her New York Times essay about it — despite having seen her just days before the news broke, according to the NY Daily News. "I saw her two days ago with my son Jamie (Haven). We all got together for his birthday, with her and Brad (Pitt). But I didn't know. It wasn't obvious at all," Voight says. "I found out (Tuesday) morning. I was as surprised as anyone and deeply moved by the way she's handled this. She's a very extraordinary person, the way she examined it and what she shared."

Recent behaviour suggests Selena Gomez is not really single?

Selena Gomez. ALL IMAGES GETTY

Selena Gomez may have recently declared herself single in a radio interview, but the amount of time she's spending around Justin Bieber's house seems to suggest otherwise. Gomez was spotted leaving her on-again, off-again boyfriend's home late Tuesday morning, or so says an E! News report. According to an eyewitness, Gomez looked "happy" and "spent the rest of the day at home." Bieber, for his part, was in the recording studio most of the day.

I've met enough winemakers who think they're rock stars, so I guess it's only fair that a rock star can think himself a winemaker. Dave Matthews, the man behind the newly released The Dreaming Tree wines, is only the latest celeb to grape it up.

The roster of famous names making wine reads like an awards show guest list: Greg Norman, Mike Weir, Dan Aykroyd, Francis Ford Coppola, Sting, Wayne Gretzky, Madonna, and even Brangelina.

While I'd never suggest the others are dialing it in, Matthews has been hands on in choosing his Californian wine partners, and the resulting juice (if you'll forgive the obvious pun) sings in the glass.

The DT 2011 Chardonnay ($16.95 - $19.99) is a well-rounded, buttery chard with woodsy spice that just may have all you "anything but chardonnay" zealots burning your membership cards. Its red sister, The DT 2010 Crush ($16.95 - $19.99), is a mega, merlot-led blend of California North Coast fruit with a rolling flavour of plums, raspberry jam and brown sugar that will duet well with a red meat-themed, long weekend barbecue.

Who's next? My bet is on Kardashian Vineyards.

A fine burger balance

Cheeseburgers with Mango-Chile Salsa.

Fire up the barbecue this weekend and try a unique combination

This tasty cheeseburger recipe that includes the nutrient-rich, sweet mango mixed into a salsa with fiery chiles to add a south Asian flavour that will delight your taste buds.

1. Combine patty ingredients, keeping the mixture crumbly rather than compressed. With wet hands, gently form four loosely packed patties of equal size, each about 3/4 inch thick. Don't compact the meat too much or the patties will be tough. Using your thumb or the back of a spoon, make a shallow indentation about 1 inch wide in the centre of each patty. This will help the patties cook evenly and prevent them from puffing on the grill.

Ingredients

Patties
- 1 1/2 lbs ground chuck (80% lean)
- 1/2 tsp garlic powder
- 1/2 tsp kosher salt
- 1/2 tsp ground black pepper

Salsa
- 1 large mango, cut into 1/2-inch dice (about 1 cup)
- 2 tbsp roughly chopped fresh cilantro leaves
- 1 tbsp fresh lime juice
- 1 medium serrano chile pepper, seeded and minced
- 1/4 tsp kosher salt

Burgers
- 4 thin slices pepper jack cheese
- 4 hamburger buns, split
- Dijon mustard

This recipe serves four. NEWS CANADA

2. In a non-reactive bowl combine the salsa ingredients. Toss gently and then refrigerate for at least 30 minutes or up to 1 hour. (After an hour, the fruit starts to become mushy.)

3. Prepare the grill for direct cooking over medium-high heat (400 to 500 F).

4. Grill the patties over direct medium-high heat, with the lid closed, until cooked to medium doneness, 8 to 10 minutes, turning once when the patties release easily from the grate without sticking. During the last minute of grilling time, place a slice of cheese on each patty to melt, and toast the buns, cut side down, over direct heat.

5. Spread the bottom half of each bun with Dijon mustard, and serve the patties warm on the buns topped with mango salsa.

Choose a summer camp that will have a positive impact on your child. ISTOCKPHOTO/THINKSTOCK

Camp will lead to positive experiences

If you are looking to choose a summer camp experience for your child then you already have an understanding of the positive impact summer camp can have on children.

The answers to these following questions should allow you to form reasonable expectations of the camp you choose for your campers.

1 What is the camp's staff-to-camper ratio? This ratio indicates the overall level of supervision that the camp can provide your camper. Counsellor/camper ratios should be no larger than 1-to-8 for children younger than seven, or 1-to-12 for children ages eight to 16.

2 What measures does the camp take to ensure the safety of the campers? This question addresses supervision and the quality of staff. You should learn about the ages and qualifications of the staff, the camp's protocols of supervision and risk-management (buddy systems, cabin checks), and the guidelines set for campers (boundaries, water safety).

3 What is the camp's staff return rate? A high staff return rate indicates good staff supervision, dedication to camp programs, and a high level of tradition.

4 What programs does the camp offer? Are you looking for a traditional and varied camp program, or a camp where campers hone a particular set of skills/talents?

5 How do campers choose their programs at camp? Asking for a description of a "typical day at camp" will give you a good idea of the campers' schedule, and will help you determine whether or not the campers' time is being spent productively, actively, and enjoyably.

6 What does the camp director/staff want the campers to take away with them at the end of their camping experience? The camp director's answer to this question will reveal the overall values and philosophies of the camp.

7 How does the camp and staff deal with issues like homesickness, bullying, and campers with special needs? Staff should be trained in such areas as age-appropriate needs, behaviour management, methods of inclusion, and skill development.

Inspire child's learning phases

Being a parent through the ages and stages of childhood is demanding but also rewarding, especially when you see your child flourish. Remember to include camp on your best-choice list of places where that happens.

Here is a quick guide to understand how kids at various ages grow and learn at summer camps.

Your child is four to six years old — they are a sponge for information. For kids at this stage, camp offers early social experiences that they won't have available through any other means. Camp also exposes them to adult leaders other than parents.

Your child is seven to nine — they are developing their own interests. Camp can help them explore these interests though activities such as drama, computer and tech or specific sports. Camp also offers new opportunities to socialize and take on new challenges.

Your child is 10 to 12 — they are graduating into adolescence and are torn between being a kid and acting older.

Summer camp is an opportunity for children to learn and grow. FUSE/THINKSTOCK

Camp offers these tweens/preteens an outlet to be themselves among their peers. They also meet kids of different backgrounds and abilities; kids this age at camp start to learn tolerance of others.

Your child is 13 to 15 — they are beginning to stretch their adolescent wings at an age many people find to be one of the most difficult or challenging phases in life. Kids this age are learning who they are, dealing with the attitudes of others and developing self-esteem. Camp offers these children an environment where they can start and foster friendships and can grow self-esteem through mentoring those who are younger.

Your child is 16 and older — they are developing a firm idea of who they are. Camp offers strong, older role models as well as the opportunity for them to act as one to younger children. Teenagers at camp get time away from their parents, learn on their own and may have a chance to learn some appreciation for their parents, for city life and other things they may be taking for granted. They can also start to develop leadership skills as junior counsellors or even as counsellors.

Kids and teens that go to camp have proven to become leaders at schools, on their teams and when they move on in their careers. Choose a great camp for your kids and give them a head start, but remember — when choosing a camp, be realistic about your child's physical, intellectual and emotional development levels and their limitations. Every child develops at a different pace and in a unique way, but all can find a place in the sun at camp.

Festival fosters creativity

The Vancouver International Children's Festival, presented by Coast Capital Savings, is setting the stage for its 36th annual event, taking place May 27 to June 2 on Granville Island. Professional performing artists from Norway, Africa, Germany and Canada will be performing.

Six Granville Island venues, including four indoor and two outdoor festival environments, will host 12 shows. In addition, the festival hosts more than 15 hands-on arts activities such as shadow puppetry, an outdoor weaving sculpture, bicycle spin-art, origami, a sock puppet workshop, circus skills, the Twist & Toddle play area, and much more.

The Vancouver International Children's Festival will feature many hands-on arts activities from May 27 to June 2 on Granville Island. CONTRIBUTED

Highlights of this year's festival include: The North American premiere of Sparrow, a show from Norway that is created specifically for babies and tots (seven to 24 months old); the Canadian debut of Cirque Zuma Zuma, African acrobats who were thrust into stardom performing on America's Got Talent; the multimedia sensation Queen of Colours, which blends shadow puppetry, live music, painting and video projection into a theatrical performance; and four special evening performances including two Pyjama Nights.

Tickets for featured performances are $25 per adult, $15 per child including tax and service charges, with exceptions for Sparrow ($25 adult, $5 child) and the Variety Show ($25 adult, $22 child). Show tickets include access to all hands-on arts activities.

For access to hands-on arts activities only, purchase an activity wristband for $8 per person (sold on-site only).

Tickets are on sale and can be purchased online at childrensfestival.ca, by phone at 1-877-840-0457, in advance at Tickets Tonight, Plaza Level, 200 Burrard St., or during the festival at the on-site box office located between Festival House and the Waterfront Theatre on Granville Island.

Lions hope to lure receiver back to den

CFL. Club to present Emmanuel Arceneaux an 'aggressive' offer

CAM TUCKER
cam.tucker@metronews.ca

The B.C. Lions will be taking the next step in trying to add a familiar name to their receiving corps.

Lions general manager and VP of football operations Wally Buono said that the club will be making a contract offer to receiver Emmanuel Arceneaux either Thursday afternoon or Friday.

Arceneaux spent two seasons with the Lions, in 2009 and 2010.

Over that time, he caught 130 regular-season passes for a total of 1,972 yards and 12 touchdowns.

One of Arceneaux's biggest catches with B.C. came in the 2010 Western semifinal against the Saskatchewan Roughriders, when he came down with a Travis Lulay Hail Mary pass in the end zone for a touchdown with no time left on the clock to send the game to overtime.

After two years with the Lions, Arceneaux travelled south to the U.S. and the National Football League.

He originally signed with the Minnesota Vikings and was recently waived by the New York Jets.

Bardia Ghahremani, the agent for Arceneaux, told Metro that four CFL teams are pursuing Arceneaux, with the Toronto Argonauts, the defending Grey Cup champions, making an "extremely" competitive push to land the receiver.

"We've been in touch for over two years, and I think this is the place he wants to be," said Buono Thursday, after the Lions unveiled their new 60th-season logo during a press conference at BC Place stadium.

"But at the end of the day, it's a business, and he's got to make a decision based on what's best for him. We're hoping to make him an offer either (Thursday afternoon) or tomorrow and we'll see where it goes from there."

However, just because there was once a relationship between Arceneaux and the Lions does not mean it will be automatically rekindled for 2013.

"I'm not looking for a hometown discount or I'm not going to take for granted the fact that there is a relationship," said Buono.

"We're going to look at this as a business decision. I think Manny (Arceneaux) can come in and help us. I think he has a rapport with our offensive coaching staff, he has a great rapport with our quarterback (Lulay) and I think he has a great rapport in the locker-room with our veteran players.

"When you look at all those things, you've got to be aggressive and try to get it done."

Emmanuel Arceneaux hauls in a touchdown reception during his time with the Lions on Nov. 6, 2010, in Hamilton. The Lions are expected to make a contract offer on the receiver, who is coming off stints in the NFL with the Vikings and the Jets. THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

Whitecaps recall Mitchell ahead of match vs. Portland

The Vancouver Whitecaps will not have defender Johnny Leveron in the lineup for Saturday's derby match against the Portland Timbers.

On Wednesday, Leveron received a one-game suspension from the MLS Disciplinary Committee for a dangerous tackle in last weekend's win over L.A. With Leveron out, the Whitecaps recalled centre back Carlyle Mitchell from FC Edmonton on Thursday.

Johnny Leveron
GETTY IMAGES FILE

Mitchell, 25, was loaned to FC Edmonton of the North American Soccer League in March.

The Whitecaps are coming off a win over the Galaxy last Saturday and, more recently, a 0-0 draw with the Montreal Impact in the first leg of the Amway Canadian Championship on Wednesday.

Saturday's match with the Timbers is Vancouver's first of the year in the 2013 Cascadia Cup, a cup competition between supporter groups of the Whitecaps, Timbers and Seattle Sounders FC.

Saturday also marks the first meeting between the Whitecaps and Timbers since Oct. 21, when Portland shut out Vancouver at BC Place.

The Whitecaps went into that match needing a win to capture a playoff spot. However, the loss temporarily delayed the club's historical post-season berth until later in the evening. METRO

Bruins draw first blood against Rangers

Brad Marchand scored with 4:20 left in the first overtime and the Boston Bruins beat the New York Rangers 3-2 in the first playoff game in 40 years between the Original Six teams.

Marchand, Boston's top goal scorer in the regular season, got his first of the post-season on a pass from Patrice Bergeron. Marchand had carried the puck up the right side, passed it to Bergeron and kept going toward the net. Bergeron passed across the slot, and Marchand tipped it past goalie Henrik Lundqvist from the left side of the crease.

The Bruins carried the play throughout overtime. They applied constant pressure but couldn't score during a power play when Derek Dorsett was penalized for interference at 2:20 of overtime.

Boston nearly won in regulation, but Johnny Boychuk's shot from the point clanged off the post with one-tenth of a second left. Then he hit the left post again at 6:34 of overtime.

Game 2 of the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinals is set for Sunday night in Boston.

Quarter-final déjà vu for Canada

World championship. A fourth straight loss in the round of eight suffered at the hands of Sweden in shootout

Canada was eliminated in the quarter-finals of the IIHF World Championship for a fourth straight year with a 3-2 shootout loss to host Sweden on Thursday.

Fredrik Pettersson scored the winner in the fourth round of the shootout as Sweden moved on to a semifinal meeting with archrival Finland.

Trailing 1-0, Nicklas Danielsson scored a pair of power-play goals in the third period to give the hosts a 2-1 lead. Canada's Claude Giroux tied the game just over a minute after Danielsson's second goal.

Steven Stamkos of the Tampa Bay Lightning scored a second-period power-play goal.

Mike Smith of the Phoenix Coyotes stopped 30 shots in the loss, while Jhonas Enroth of the Buffalo Sabres made 39 saves for the win.

Jacob Markstrom made a pair of saves in overtime while Enroth dealt with an equipment issue.

Canada extended its run of quarter-final losses in this tournament to four straight years. Canada last advanced to the semifinals in 2009 en route to a silver medal under current Canadian head coach Lindy Ruff.

In other quarter-finals, Switzerland extended its unbeaten run in the tournament to eight wins with a 2-1 win over the Czech Republic. They'll face the United States, an 8-3 winner in Helsinki over a Russian team that had Alex Ovechkin in the lineup, in Saturday's semifinal.

Finland edged Slovakia 4-3 in Helsinki's other quarter-final.

The semifinals and Sunday's bronze- and gold-medal games are in Stockholm.

Canada had beaten the host country 3-0 in the preliminary round, but that was before the arrival of Swedish forwards Henrik and Daniel Sedin and defenceman Alex Edler from the Vancouver Canucks. THE CANADIAN PRESS

A loss within a loss

Canada lost captain Eric Staal to a knee-on-knee collision with Alex Edler in Sweden's zone at 15:52 of the first period. The Carolina Hurricanes forward went down writhing in pain and clutching his right knee. He needed assistance off the ice and did not return.

- Edler was served a major and a game misconduct and threw his stick like a harpoon when he left the ice.

NBA playoffs

Knicks draw to 3-2 in series with Pacers

Carmelo Anthony scored 28 points to help the New York Knicks stay alive in the Eastern Conference semi-finals with an 85-75 victory over the Indiana Pacers in Game 5 on Thursday night.

Reserves J.R. Smith and Chris Copeland each had 13 points for the Knicks, who trail 3-2 and will need a victory Saturday in Indiana to force a seventh game in New York on Monday. They are trying to become the ninth NBA team to overcome a 3-1 deficit to win a series.

Anthony, who didn't make a basket in the fourth quarter of either game in Indiana, made a jumper midway through the fourth quarter after Indiana closed within four points. He followed with two free throws, Raymond Felton made a layup, and the Knicks were never in jeopardy again.

Paul George had 23 points, six rebounds and six assists for the Pacers. They played without point guard George Hill because of a concussion and committed 19 turnovers.

But George battled foul trouble and couldn't contain Anthony quite as well as he had while the Pacers easily won the previous two games.

David West had 17 points and 10 rebounds for the Pacers, who were trying to reach the Eastern Conference finals for the first time since 2004.

The winner faces the defending NBA champion Miami Heat in a series that will start Wednesday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NBA. Days of Thunder limited without Westbrook

The way Kevin Martin describes it, the Oklahoma City Thunder lost the "vision" of a potential championship run the morning they learned all-star point guard Russell Westbrook would be out for the rest of the post-season.

Despite fighting to the end in a series of narrow losses to Memphis, the Thunder's season — which seemed so promising even when the playoffs began — is over much sooner than expected following a five-game loss in the Western Conference semifinals.

After making it to the NBA Finals a year earlier, Oklahoma City claimed the No. 1 seed in the West and was the favourite to make it back.

And then?

"We lost the guy that has the keys to our car," Martin said Thursday.

Right up until the end, the club believed it could overcome even Westbrook's injury, suffered in a chance collision with Houston's Patrick Beverley in Game 2 of the first round. But after winning the next game, Oklahoma City went 2-6 without Westbrook.

After Westbrook's injury, Kevin Durant averaged 31.8 points, 9.9 rebounds and 6.2 assists. It still wasn't enough to lift his team. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
This has been a busy week for you, so maybe you need to slow down a bit. Right. And maybe the Sun will rise in the west and the tide won't come in. Aries never slows down — it's not in your nature.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Mars in your sign gives you all the energy and ambition you need to make a name for yourself, so go for it. Too often in the past you have waited for other people to take the lead.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
The thing you need to realize is that you don't have to enjoy something to be good at it. If fate points you in a certain direction today then that is the direction you should move.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Listen to what others say you should do today — then do the opposite. You know your mind better than they do so follow what your instincts tell you.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Today, you will be confronted by someone who has more power than you but that must not be allowed to faze you. They may have might on their side but you have right and that's why you will win in the end.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You may have strong opinions about an issue but don't waste your time shouting about it. Find ways you can make a practical difference, then get on with them quietly. It's not about words, it's about actions.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Having told so many people what you intend to accomplish don't you think it's about time you started actually doing it? Anyone can talk about making a difference but only a few people ever get round to it.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Mars in your opposite sign of Taurus will help you get rid of an emotional attachment you no longer need. Scorpio has a reputation for ruthlessness and today everyone will see it.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
You may be tempted to work twice as hard at something to make sure you get it done on time but is it necessary to put in so much effort and maybe exhaust yourself? No. Ease up.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Be careful what you start over the next 24 hours because you will have no choice but to finish it before you can move on to something else. Think before you act and don't let your passions rule you.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Chances are you will find yourself involved in some kind of dispute with your nearest and dearest. Whatever else happens, you must resist the urge to open up old wounds.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Someone else's good idea can be adapted by you to suit your own needs. Is that immoral? Of course not. There is no copyright on ideas, so you are free to take it and develop it any way you see fit. SALLY BROMPTON
